

WINS VAN PELT MEDAL

William R. Merriam, a junior dairy husbandry student has been awarded the Hugh C. Van Pelt medal for 1917. Mr. Merriam was first choice out of a field of forty-eight men who competed for the medal, and left the field by a considerable margin. All of the work was carried on under the direction of Prof. L. S. Gillette of the dairy husbandry department, and consisted in weekly classes at the dairy farm as well as all of the classes judged while on the Waterloo trip.

From these competing in this work the high men to compete for next year's dairy cattle judging team were picked. These men will be given further work in judging next fall and a team of three to five men will be picked to represent Iowa State College at the Waterloo show and the National Dairy congress—Amos (Ia.) Times.

The Wm. Merriam mentioned above is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Merriam of this city and is known to a number of our people.

Dr. C. T. Foote is a business visitor in Milwaukee and Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Jones reported to Baraboo today.

NOTICE FOR ADMINISTRATION AND NOTICE TO CREDITORS
State of Wisconsin, County Court Wood County—In Probate.

In the Estate of Margaretta Ingebrigtsen, deceased.

Notice is hereby given, That at the Special term of said court to be held on the 2nd Tuesday (being the 21st day) of September, A. D. 1917, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the County Court House in the city of Grand Rapids, county of Wood, and State of Wisconsin, there will be heard, and considered, and adjudged, all claims against said Margaretta Ingebrigtsen, late of the city of Grand Rapids, in said county, deceased.

And Notice is hereby further given, That all such claims for contribution, allowance must be presented to said court, to be heard, and considered, and adjudged, on or before the 15th day of December, A. D. 1917, or before said court.

By the Court:
W. J. CONWAY, County Judge.
Humbrecht & Chalkas, Attorneys.

James Dolan, Sr. celebrated his 90th birthday on Wednesday. Mr. Dolan is one of the old settlers of Grand Rapids and is still getting around pretty well for a man of his age.

Dr. C. C. Rowley, who for some time past has been located at the Winnebago hospital for the insane, has received an appointment as first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps, and has been ordered to report at Fort Jay, Kansas. He will be accompanied by Dr. Coombs, surgeon at St. Mary's hospital of Oshkosh, and Dr. John Provost, a former resident of Grand Rapids, who is the prominent surgeon of Oshkosh, and they expect to leave for France in the near future. Mrs. Rowley, who was formerly Miss Agnes Davis, recently passed the examination for first order nurse and will accompany the doctor to France.

The new building of the Wood County Telephone Company, which was supposed to be completed about the first of September, according to the contract, will not be completed at that time, although it will be pretty well along, with a probability that it will take about two months more than the allotted time to finish it. We do not want to fault the contractor, as it was found impossible to do so, as no contractor would take work this year with a time limit on it, owing to the difficulty in getting material by rail and the scarcity of help.

Stovey Norton, the original Iron King, is in the market for all kinds of old iron. He also buys barrels and sells barrels to the local trade. He also handles stove castings and repairs stoves. He is getting along in years and is a booster; has been in business for thirty years and can be relied upon to do just what he claims he will.

One small grower there who has been interested in the business for a number of years past, made the statement to the writer that in five years, if no more trees are planted, he will require 40,000 pickers to harvest the crop, and as new orchards are being planted right along and old ones enlarged, it is quite evident that the work of harvesting the crop is going to be quite a problem within a few years.

Naturally, with the preponderance of trees there at this time, at the end of the year, the people talk cherries, think cherries, and do almost everything but eat them.

TO OBSERVE LABOR DAY
It is entirely probable that a more general observance of Labor Day will occur in this city this year than ever before. The merchants and managers of manufacturing plants have signified their intention of shutting down all day on that day, so that business of all kinds will be practically at a standstill, and the people will have a chance to spend the day in any manner that they prefer.

Heretofore the people of Grand Rapids have celebrated Labor Day by a parade, and the result has been that it could hardly be told from any working day, as all the stores were open and business was carried along as usual.

WHERE THE PEOPLE THINK IN CHERRIES

During the past week the writer made a visit to Door county, in the northeastern part of the state, where exist some of the largest cherry orchards in the world, and where, to an outsider, at this time of the year, it seems as if the country was one large orchard. Of course, there are also many apple trees in that same district, but they are not so much in evidence as the cherries, the latter being ripe, and as the crop is good, the trees present a handsome appearance.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when the land in Door county was being agitated at almost any price, as agriculturists had not discovered that the soil or climate was particularly adapted for any special crop. Then a university professor went up there and looked things over and saw some of the apple orchards that had been planted by farmers, and he decided that the conditions were just right for the growing of cherries. He showed his faith in the proposition by buying a large tract of land and planting it to apple trees and small fruits, and it did not take long for the cherry growers to find out that the old fellow knew what he was talking about, and the result was that some of the farmers who had been scratching along for years with mortgages on their farms, went into the fruit business, paid off the mortgage and had money in the bank.

This was like the discovery of gold in California, and there was a rush to see who was the first to get a hand in the golden harvest. Story had that was a joke at $25 an acre, began to sell for $300 an acre or more, and many of the farmers who had been scratching along for years with mortgages on their farms, went into the fruit business, paid off the mortgage and had money in the bank.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check to the amount of ten per cent (10%) of the bid.

This will be opened on Monday, August 27, 1917, at 7:30 p. m., and must be in the hands of the clerk of the Board on or before 12 o'clock M. on August 27, 1917.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

MAY ORGANIZE HOME GUARD

The matter of organizing a home guard in this city is again being talked of to some extent, and it is possible that something may be done along this line. The withdrawal of the national guard from the state will leave us without any soldiers of any kind, and in case of an emergency demand there would be nobody with any military knowledge or training to call out, so that it is desirable that some sort of an organization should be formed.

PROBABLY IN FRANCE

KNIGHTS SUBSCRIBE LIBERALLY

The Knights of Columbus of Grand Rapids responded nobly to the call for funds for war purposes, the members of the local branch having raised about $800 alone.

During the past week the writer made a visit to Door county, in the northeastern part of the state, where the most of the largest cherry orchards in the world, and where, it is said, at this time of the year, it seems as if the country was one large orchard. Of course, there are also many apple trees at that same district, but they are not so much in evidence as the cherries, the latter being ripe, and as the crop is good, the trees present a handsome appearance.

There was a time, not so many years ago, when the land in Door county went begging at almost any price, and the soil or climate was particularly adapted for any special crop. Then a university professor went up there and looked things over and saw some of the apple orchards, and he decided that the conditions were just right for the growing of apples. He showed his faith in the proposition by buying a large tract of land and planting it to apple trees and small fruits, and it did not take long to convince some of the natives that the old fellow knew what he was talking about, and the result was that some of the farmers who had been scratching along for years with a mortgage on their farm, went into the fruit business, paid off the mortgage and had money to spare.

One of the discoveries of gold in California, and there was a rush to see who could be the first to get a hand in the golden harvest. Stony land that was a joke at $25 an acre, began to sell for $200 an acre for orchard purposes, and there wasn't much of it for sale even at that price.

Those who already owned farms set out some trees, and others bought land and planted some. Some of them knew nothing about horticulture, and were slow to learn, and they did not get along as rapidly as others, but all made some progress.

At present the name of Door county cherries has extended to every part of the country.

One concern went into the proposition on the co-operative plan and they have acquired 70,000 trees.

These are mostly young trees as yet, but they are bearing this year better than ever before, and it is quite a wonderful sight to see a tree that has never before borne fruit.

One of the greatest problems that confronts the grower is harvesting the crop. It has been especially hard this year, as the crop is unusually large, and it is in the picking season is short it does not pay the pickers to travel a great distance to engage in the work. A number of Boy Scouts were working in the orchards, and boy fashion, they were not doing any more real labor than was absolutely necessary.

They were all fine mathematicians, and they discovered that if they contracted the habit of turning in just about 80 pounds of cherries a day, they would be able to get a good price for their crop.

They were all very good at their work, and they were all very good at their work, and they were all very good at their work.

There are a number of Indians in Door county, and they make some of the best pickers that they have there. The pickers receive at the rate of a cent and a half a box for picking, and they make all the dollars at the work. It is needless to say that those that make six dollars are putting in full time and are not loafing any on the job.

There are two varieties of cherries planted by those who have any considerable sized orchards. One ripens two weeks later than the early ones, and this enables them to string the picking out over a considerable length of time, which would not be possible were they all of one variety.

The cherry of one of the red varieties, there being none of the black kinds raised. The red ones look much more inviting and sell more readily, although not so good as the black ones, and they are very tight unless left on the tree until deep ripe, which is never done if it can be avoided, as they do not reach the market in such good shape.

To give some idea of the amount of fruit that is shipped out of there it might be stated that the Green Bay & Western on the biggest day of shipment took out one thousand boxes of cherries, and many cars are shipped out each day.

They have a fruit growers' association over there, and this season the entire crop was contracted for by outside parties before it was picked. The result is that it is often difficult to buy cherries right there, and they are never cheap, as the contract price this year was about $1.65 a crate.

Then there is a preserving company located there that offers to take all the cherries that is brought in, paying about the same price as the outside men. The only difference is that while the cherries are put into boxes and crates, thus saving this expense to the grower, and the result is that a number who do not belong to the association sell to the canning company.

One small grower there who has been interested in the business for a number of years past, made the statement to the writer that in five years, if no more trees are planted, he will require 40,000 pickers to harvest the crop, and as new orchards are being planted right along and old ones enlarged, it is quite evident that the matter of harvesting the crop is going to be quite a problem within a few years.

Naturally, with the preponderance of cherries there at this time of the year, the people talk cherries, and cherries do almost everything but stand.

LOCAL BOY MAKING GOOD

Walter Merriam, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Merriam of this city, is now located in Humboldt county, California, where he has a large dairy.

Mr. Merriam is a multi-millionaire, and is a famous importer of Jersey stock and has what is considered a big farm in a country where big farms are common.

Mr. Merriam has already invested the sum of $335,000 in the farm and expects to increase this amount to half a million by the end of the year. He is now in the dairy business.

Mr. Merriam is a very successful man, and is a very successful man, and is a very successful man.

TO OBSERVE LABOR DAY

It is entirely probable that a more general observance of Labor Day will occur in this city this year than ever before. The merchants and manufacturers are planning to have a general closing of their stores on that day.

The intention of shutting down all day on that day, so that the business of all kinds will be at a standstill, and all working men will have a day to spend the day in a manner that they prefer.

Heretofore the people of Grand Rapids have not paid much respect to Labor Day, and the result has been that it could hardly be called a holiday. The merchants and manufacturers have not been very cooperative in the matter.

It is hoped that this year will be different, and that the people of Grand Rapids will give Labor Day the respect it deserves.

Dr. C. C. Rowley, who for some time past has been located at the Winnebago hospital for the insane, has received an appointment as assistant surgeon at the Medical Reserve Corps, and has been ordered to report at Fort Riley, Kansas. He will be accompanied by Dr. Coombs, surgeon at St. Mary's hospital of Oshkosh, and Dr. John Provost, a prominent surgeon of Oshkosh, and they expect to leave for France in the near future.

Dr. Rowley, who was formerly Miss Agnes Rowley, is a first order nurse and will accompany the doctor to France.

BUILDING WILL NOT BE DONE

The new building of the Wood County Telephone Company, which was supposed to be completed about the first of September, according to the contract, will not be completed until the fall, as the work will be very slow.

It was hoped to have it finished on time, but it was found impossible to do so, as it was found impossible to do so, as it was found impossible to do so.

It is now expected that the building will be completed by the first of November.

WISCONSIN HAS A WOMAN COW TESTER

It is probably nothing remarkable that there should be a woman engaged in cow testing, but it is probably a little remarkable that Wisconsin should have the first in the history of the country and that she should come from Grand Rapids and be home being in the town of Saratoga, on Route No. 8.

A recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman has quite a write-up of Miss Bessie Lipsitz, who is well known in this city, having attended school here and graduated from the Grand Rapids Business college in 1914, and according to the write-up she is proving quite successful in the work.

Following is what the Dairyman has to say about the matter:

"Well, you may not think it a 'woman' but that would suit my wife."

"Gosh! but that would suit my wife."

These and similar expressions greeted my proposal to the members of the Avoca Cow Testing Association that they hire a young lady as a tester. Since there were no objections and there were a number of possible advantages, Miss Bessie Lipsitz was chosen for the test.

The members of the Wisconsin Dairyman's Association have had a great difficulty in securing sufficient competent men for testers in the 77 active associations in Wisconsin, largely because of the need for men in the army and the higher wages paid in other industries. Uncle Sam's army and the higher wages paid in other industries.

Following the production and cutting of the cow testing association is one of the most effective agencies for increasing the production and cutting of the cow testing association.

The war has opened many new fields to women both in this country and Europe. It has now the man's hand dominating the cow testing association work in the United States, although women have sometimes been employed in Denmark and Germany.

There seems to be no reason why the place of a man in this work, provided, of course, she has the necessary training and experience for the work. In fact, her entrance into new fields, and the possibility that she may be better able to interest the farm women in the dairy business, a woman may be able to do more service in this work than a man.

Miss Bessie Lipsitz was raised on an Upper Wisconsin dairy farm where she took a full course, and later a post graduate course in dairy farming. But she preferred to have a more modern science in her university training, so she wrote an article on "Calf Raising" and won a scholarship for the Short Course in Agriculture, at the University of Wisconsin.

To show that her work in the College of Agriculture did not disqualify her for the work of the dairy maid, she milked nine cows each night and morning throughout the summer.

Personality is an important factor in the success of a tester, for if the members and their families do not look forward to his visit, the work is not able to get the proper service for the cow. The statement of the wife of one of the members regarding Miss Lipsitz—"We can not help but like her," is a very good example of the good nature, the sympathetic understanding, the vital interest and the kind heartiness that this young woman brings to her work.

Cleanliness and accuracy are also important factors in the tester's work. The housewife does not stay up nights planning a welcome next month for the tester that clutters up the kitchen with spilled acid on the table, and the dairyman does not respect for his testing and calculating accurately or keep his records neatly. Miss Lipsitz says: "It does not take any more time to keep accurate records than to keep inaccurate ones, and it is a great deal more pleasant to keep accurate records than to keep inaccurate ones."

Men who spent the most time and effort to get this, the first association in Iowa county, started were elected as its officers. President S. Swinehart and Secretary J. H. Hutton are both very enthusiastic over the work, but the other members, their wives, and the boys and girls are equally well pleased.

Judging from the accompanying illustration and statements, you will be sure the Avoca Cow Testing Association is going to have a very successful and pleasant year, which will be a great deal more pleasant to keep accurate records than to keep inaccurate ones.

Many Autos Mired

The rain of Sunday was the cause of considerable trouble among automobile drivers. There were a large number of people made the trip to the Douglas that day, some from this city and others from further up the line. Soon after the start rain began to fall and after a short time the return trip was very difficult. The road between this city and Kellbourn is sandy, and generally pretty good in almost any kind of weather, but the excessive rain on Sunday was almost impossible to get thru, and many of the cars were stuck in the mud and had to be pulled out while those that did get thru had an awful time.

All of the local garages had their cars out assisting in getting the crippled ones into town and they were kept busy all the next day and the following night.

WORK HINDERS STREET CARS

The concrete work being done on Third avenue has made it so that the street cars cannot run on the bridge as the passage of the cars has a tendency to settle the new concrete and put it out of true. Some that was laid on Monday settled so much that it was necessary to stop work on that day and it was not until the concrete mixer was used that the work was able to proceed.

As the work will continue for some time yet it is probable that the cars will not be able to run up town for quite awhile.

CALLS DRAFTED MEN

FIRST OF NATIONAL ARMY WILL START TRAINING SEPT. 1, SAYS OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

RULING HITS MARRIED MEN

Government Is Convinced That Pay Received in the Army Is Sufficient to Order Many Men Into Service.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The first one-third of the quota of 687,000 men drafted for army service under the selective draft bill will be called to colors September 1 and sent to training camp between September 1 and 5, according to announcement made today by the War Department.

One-third of the men drafted into the United States army will be called to colors September 1. The first call of the drafted men will thus total 229,000 men.

Just how they will proceed to their training, 20 pages of rules and regulations drafted by the War Department and approved by the War Department and approved by the War Department will be given to the men at their arrival at camps.

The men who are drafted in the call for the first one-third of the quota will be notified by the adjutant general and the district and local boards.

The war department has been doing a lot of calculating in the last few days, and its deductions have given birth to a wholesome doubt that a lot of married men are better off where they now are employed than they would be in the army service. Provost Marshal General Crowder communicated the findings of the war department to Maj. M. B. Chipfield, his representative in Chicago, on the subject. He pointed out that a soldier's pay under the new regulations will not be less than $30 a month, and that he would be provided with food, clothing, and housing provided at the government's expense, and that probably that stipend, with all the attention and things thrown in, offsets the earnings of many a man now employed.

FIRST ORDERS TO NEW ARMY GIVEN BY GEN. CROWDER

Drafted Men Are Told How to Report for Duty.

BOARDS IN CHARGE OF MEN

Recruits Will Be Summoned to the Colors on September 1 and Sent to the Camps Within Four Days.—New Exemption Rules.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Revised regulations to govern physical examination of men registered under the selective draft were issued by Surgeon General Gorgas of the army and communicated to the governors of the states for information of local boards. The changes deal for the most part with changes of proportionate weight and height, but many result in the recall of some men rejected heretofore on physical grounds.

Boards in Charge of Men.

Local exemption boards will be in full charge of assembling the men called to the colors September 1. They will give the new higher force of the selective draft into military life, provide the men with meals, shelter and transportation, and escort them personally to the train for the mobilization camps. The civilian control of the men will continue up to the time they march through the gates of the mobilization camps and report to the command.

Explicit regulations under which the first segment of the national army will be mobilized were issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder at Washington. They came on the heels of a series of rulings cutting down the physical requirements and urging the boards to be lenient in the last degree in granting exemption on account of age.

In some districts as high as 80 per cent of the men called for examination are being called for discharge on the ground of dependent relatives.

Indication of Shirkers.

The war department says this indicates that shirkers are taking advantage of the regulations and that it is necessary to interfere seriously with the raising of the national army. General Crowder's latest direction to boards is:

"Reduce discharges for dependency to a far more restricted class and clearly defined circumstances."

General Crowder's message, which was telegraphed to the governors of all states for distribution to local boards, says all registered men are imperiled by the improper claims that have been filed. It puts it emphatically up to the local boards to serve as a barrier and to check off all false and exaggerated claims.

The new regulations grant a moderate allowance of twenty-four pounds for men between sixty-four and sixty-six inches in height, seven to nine pounds between sixty-seven and sixty-nine inches, nine to ten pounds between seventy and seventy-four inches, and twelve pounds above seventy-five inches. The effect of the regulations is to reduce the normal weight requirements for tall men.

Details of Program.

The details of the program for mobilizing the first 230,000 men called to the colors September 1 and forwarded to their camps before September 5 are as follows:

The actual call will go from the provost marshal general to the state adjutant general, stating the number of men to be supplied. Each number will be at once informed of how many men he must furnish and the adjutant general will fix the day for mobilizing the men.

The local board at once will make out the list of men to fill the call from the roll of accepted men, and will fix the place of entrainment and time of departure.

Orders to the men will be posted and sent by mail. The men will be directed to report to the local board at its headquarters not less than 12 hours nor more than 24 hours before the time of departure for camp.

From the time specified for reporting to the local board for military duty each man called to the colors "shall be in the military service of the United States."

Plans Up to Boards.

Before the men arrive at board headquarters the board members must arrange for their accommodation, food and sanitary sleeping places, and clean and sanitary lodging and meals. Tickets to be taken in payment and be returned for cash later by the government disbursing officer. In its discretion a board may give the men permission to remain at their homes.

At board headquarters at the hour fixed for reporting the men will be drawn up, the roll called and agents will take them personally to their quarters, remaining with them until every man is accounted for. The board must then fix the quality of food shall be good, and the board is held liable for seeing that meals are adequate.

Retreat roll call at the board headquarters, set for 5:30 p. m. on the day of reporting to the board, will be the first military ceremony the selected men pass through. The board must see that the quality of food shall be good, and the board is held liable for seeing that meals are adequate.

U. S. BARES BIG PLOT

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO BREAK DOWN DRAFT ARMY PLANS.

Officials at Seattle, Wash., Say Teutons Engineered Wholesale Exemptions—Twenty Face Arrest in Texas.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 10.—United States agents here uncovered a gigantic plot to break down the selective service army plans by engineering wholesale exemptions.

Propaganda, which District Attorney Gray Allen says is "undoubtedly of German origin," is being mailed in men called for physical examination here, urging and showing how to evade service on the ground of "conscientious objections." No arrests have yet been made.

This, together with the arrest in Portland of Alvin von Alvensleben, internationally known German, on orders from President Wilson himself, were the latest disclosures of Teutonic intrigue uncovered by the Northwest.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 10.—Warrants were issued at Dallas, Tex., for 20 arrests on charges of engineering exemptions from the draft law.

The winter wheat yield is now harvested, and is estimated by the government at 1,456,000,000, compared with a yield of 1,352,000,000 last year, which proved ample for this nation's home and export needs.

U. S. WON'T PAY MIDDLEMAN

Their Offers to Sell Declined by Government—Army Goods Now Bought Direct.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Big Army, particularly department stores and mail order houses having a large commercial business of their own, but which have sought to increase their profits by acting as middlemen between the government and the manufacturers on government contracts, are voting serious objections these days to the implicable attitude of the council of national defense, which is objecting to paying a middleman's profit of 10 per cent to them when it is not necessary and does not in any way benefit the government. One of the largest of these concerns in the country is reliably reported to have much material on hand for sale to the government, but the offer has been refused because the government is able to wipe out the middleman's profit on its own account. Purchases made by the government before the entry of the United States into the war and immediately thereafter, before the council of national defense was organized for action, are said to reveal the fact that on some contracts that were made as early as four and five middlemen's profits paid to different factors in the selling process. Every encouragement is being given by the government for these big concerns to carry on their usual commercial business, but their attempt to intervene on behalf of the government has been declined with thanks.

3,500 MADE ARMY OFFICERS

Fort Sheridan Men Get Notice of Rank They Will Receive in Service of Uncle Sam.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Aug. 10.—More than 3,500 Fort Sheridan training camp students were made commissioned officers in the new American national army.

Little more than half of this number were made second lieutenants, with slightly over 600 receiving captaincies, and about 300 later will be appointed lieutenants, it was reported.

By order of the war department, the names of the men receiving commissions are not to be made public until permission is granted from Washington. The permission was expected before Sunday, according to Colonel Nicholson.

The simplest of ceremonies were gone through by the men when the commissions were granted. They were lined up by companies, the Wisconsin-Midwestern men first, and marched into the headquarters office. Then the names of the men were read by Major Cavanaugh, senior instructor.

Paris Marries Serge to Cotton.

On some summer frocks of cotton voile the belt, collar and band on the lower edge of the skirt are trimmed with serge, says Vanity Fair. Bits of serge are also employed as trimmings. Economical and smart is the plain voile frock with necessary decoration supplied by a bright-colored bag, the flowing ribbons of which are attached to a small hat or an effective parasol. Quakerish frocks of gray serge are also untrimmed, save for a bit of black satin at the neck and wrists. Hats are almost masculine in their severity, but no matter how simple the hat or frock—if it is made in Paris it is smart.

Eccentric Footwear in Paris.

Paris women are wearing low shoes made of two leathers, or of leather and fabric combined, with tailored street costumes. A favored combination is patent leather with cowhide, and there are shoes of black velvet with white antelope trimming. High sandals of gray or mustard-colored antelope are cut out in conventional designs to show the lining of white antelope, and patent leather sandals are cut in the same way to show an underlay of white satin. The American woman is amazed at the eccentric footwear affected by Parisians. Such shoes never obtain favor over here, though there is nothing to be gained in the way of distinctness or pretentiousness in American boots and pumps for summer wear. It is to be a season of white footwear undoubtedly; there are high-leather white buttoned boots, thin slender white pumps, smart tenners, oxfords, also white, and a new white canvas boot with Cuban heel—military heel—and buttons of brass stamped with tiny American eagles—these for the girl who goes in for patriotic effects in dress.

Summer Furs.

The summer fur is still persisted in and of late the fashion has been just these things are not generally adopted at all. And a good many women secretly hope that they will not last long. They were never intended for a western climate, but for the shore or for a place situated where cool breezes are likely to come up suddenly.

Battle Followed Attempt of Policemen to Disperse Crowd—Son of Former Police Chief Among Five Men Placed Under Arrest.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 9.—Five hundred soldiers of southern Illinois, commanded by Col. Charles B. Ryan of Springfield, are on guard duty in Springfield following riotous mobs in various parts of the city on Tuesday night in connection with the street car strike. Adj. Gen. Frank S. Dickson assumed personal command of the Ninth infantry, and mobs in all parts of the city were dispersed.

The riots followed the shooting of Policeman John Bell, who was attempting to disperse a crowd at Ninth street and North Grand avenue. Bell died a few hours later at a local hospital. Two bullets, alleged to have been fired from a street car, manned by nonunion men, hit Bell in the head. Five men are under arrest, pending an investigation. They are: Fred S. Hall, son of former Chief of Police B. Hall, and Joe Press of St. Louis, who say they were hired to come to Springfield to guard street cars, and Motorman William Koehle and Conductor Gus Lane.

Herbert Hoover has completed the last detail of work preparatory to putting the law into effect. Scores of agents are scattered throughout the country ready to co-operate with the food control department at Washington.

CALLS DRAFTED MEN

FIRST OF NATIONAL ARMY WILL START TRAINING SEPT. 1, SAYS OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Government is Convinced That Pay Received in the Army is Sufficient to Order Many Men into Service.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The first one-third of the quota of 587,000 men drafted for army service under the selective training bill will be called to colors (September 1) and sent to training camps between September 1 and 5, according to announcement made on Wednesday by Provost General Crowder to governors of all states.

One-third of the men drafted into the United States army will entrain for cantonments September 1.

The first call to service of the drafted men will thus total 229,000 men. Just how they will proceed to their cantonment, 20 pages of rules and regulations drawn up by Provost Marshal General Crowder and approved by Secretary of War Baker will direct the men, giving them what to leave behind, how they shall live en route and what they shall do on their arrival at camps.

The men who are drafted in the call for the first one-third of the quota will be notified via the adjutant general and the district and local boards. The war department has been doing a lot of calculating in the last few days, and its deductions have given birth to a wholesome doubt that a lot of married men are better off where they now are employed than they would be in the army service. Provost Marshal General Crowder commended the findings of the war department to Maj. H. M. Chipfield, his representative in Chicago, on the subject. He pointed out that a soldier's pay under the new regulations will not be less than $30 a month, with all clothing, subsistence, medical treatment and housing provided at the government's expense, and that probably that spend, with all the attention and things thrown in, offsets the earnings of many a man now employed.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Revised regulations to govern physical examination of men registered under the selective draft were issued by Surgeon General Gorgas of the army and communicated to the governors and communicated to the governors of the states for information of local boards. The changes deal for the most part with questions of proportionate weight and height, but may result in the recall of some men rejected heretofore on physical grounds.

Boards in Charge of Men. Local exemption boards will be in full charge of assembling the men called to the colors September 1. They will give the new fighting force its actual induction into military life, provide the men with meals, shelter and transportation, and escort them personally to the train for the mobilization camps. The civilian control of the men will continue up to the time they march through the gates of the cantonments and report to the commanders.

Explicit regulations under which the first segment of the national army will be mobilized were issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder at Washington. They came down on the heels of a series of orders cutting down the physical requirements and urging the physical boards to be lenient to the last degree in granting exemption on account of dependents.

In some districts as high as 80 per cent of the men called for examination are filling claims for discharge on the ground of dependent relatives.

Indications are that these indications that shirkers are taking unfair advantage of the regulations and that it actually threatens to interfere seriously with the raising of the national army. General Crowder's latest direction to boards is:

"Reduce discharges for dependency to a far more restricted class and clearly defined circumstances."

General Crowder's message, which was telegraphed to the governors of all states for distribution to local boards, says all registered men are imperiled by the improper claims that have been filed. It puts it emphatically up to the local boards to serve as a barrier and to check off all false and exaggerated claims.

The new regulations grant an undue allowance of from five to six pounds for men between sixty-four and sixty-nine inches in height, seven to nine pounds between sixty-seven and sixty-nine inches, nine to ten pounds between seventy and seventy-four inches, and twelve pounds above seventy-four inches. The effect of the figures is to reduce the normal weight requirements for tall men.

Details of Program. The details of the program for mobilizing the first 230,000 men called to the colors September 1 and forwarded to their camps before September 5 are as follows:

The actual call will go from the provost marshal general to the state adjutant general, stating the number of men to be supplied. Each local board will be at once informed of how many men it must furnish and the adjutant general will fix the day for enlisting the men.

The local board at once will make out the list of men to fill the call from the roll of accepted men, and will fix the place of entrainment and time of departure.

Orders to the men will be posted and also sent by mail. The men will be directed to report to the local board at its headquarters not less than 12 hours nor more than 24 hours before the time of departure for camp.

From the time specified for reporting to the local board for military duty each man called to the colors "shall be in the military service of the United States."

Plans Up to Boards. Before the war arrive at board headquarters the board members must arrange for their accommodation, and clean and sanitary sleeping places at hotels and lodging-houses, arrange for their meals and provide lodging and meal tickets to be taken in payment and be redeemed for cash later by the government disbursing officer. In its discretion a board may give the men permission to remain at their homes.

By order of the war department, the names of the men receiving public missions are not to be made public until permission is granted from Washington. This permission is not expected before Sunday, according to Colonel Nicholson.

The simplest of ceremonies were gone through by the men when the commissions were granted. They were lined up by companies, the Wisconsin-Michigan men first, and marched into the headquarters office. Then the names of the men were read by Major Cavanaugh, senior instructor.

3,500 MADE ARMY OFFICERS

Fort Sheridan Men Get Notice of Rank. They Will Hold in Service of Uncle Sam.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Aug. 10.—More than 3,500 Fort Sheridan training camp students were made commissioned officers in the new American national army.

Little more than half of this number were made second lieutenants, with less than 800 first lieutenants, and slightly over 600 receiving captaincies, and about 300 later will be made lieutenants. It was reported.

Paris Marries Serge to Cotton. On some summer frocks of cotton voile the belt, collar and band on the lower edge of the skirt are trimmed with serge, says Vanity Fair. Bits of jersey are also employed as trimming. Economical and smart is the plain voile frock with necessary decoration supplied by a bright-colored bag, the flowing ribbons of which are attached to the skirt or an effective parasol. Quakerlike frocks of gray serge are also untrammelled, save for a bit of black satin at the neck and wrists. Hats are almost masculine in their severity, but no matter how simple the hat or frock—if it is made in Paris it is smart.

Eccentric Footwear in Paris

Paris women are wearing low shoes made of two leathers, or of leather and fabric combined, with tailored street costumes. A favored combination seems to be patent leather with gray antelope, and there are shoes of black velvet with white antelope trimming. High sandals of gray or mustard-colored antelope are cut out in conventional designs to show a lining of white antelope or a lining of black velvet. The same way to show an underlay of white satin. The American woman is amazed at the eccentric footwear affected by Parisians.

Such shoes never obtain favor overseas, though there is nothing to be missed in the way of daintiness and prettiness in American boots and pumps for summer wear. It is to be a season of white footwear undoubtedly, but there are high-heeled white buttoned boots, trim slender white pumps, smart white canvas shoes with Cuban heel or military heel—and buttons of brass stamped with tiny American eagles—these for the girl who goes in for patriotic effects in dress.

Summer Furs

The summer fur is still persisted in and of late the sweater, too. But these styles are not generally adopted at all. And a good many women secretly hope that they will not last. They were never intended for a winter climate, but for the shore or a place situated where cool breezes are likely to come up suddenly.

U. S. BARES BIG PLOT

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO BREAK DOWN DRAFT ARMY PLANS.

Officials at Seattle, Wash., Say Teutons Engineered Wholesale Exemptions—Twenty Face Arrest in Texas.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 10.—United States agents here uncovered a gigantic plot to break down the selective service army plans by engineering wholesale exemptions.

Propaganda, which District Attorney Allen says is "undoubtedly of German origin," is being mailed to men called for physical examination here, urging and showing how to evade service on the ground of "conscientious objections." No arrests have yet been made.

This, together with the arrest in Portland of Alvo von Alvensleben, internationally known German, on orders from President Wilson himself, and the latest disclosures of Teutonic intrigue uncovered in the Northwest.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 10.—Warrants were issued at Paris, Tex., for 20 arrests on the line of Rains and Wood and counties, on the charge of conspiracy to hinder and delay enforcement of the army draft law.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 10.—Declaring that Attorney General Wiley Jones was unable to cope with the situation in Bisbee arising out of the turning back of six investigators of the Arizona State Federation of Labor, Governor Campbell departed for that city to undertake a personal investigation.

Only a force of federal troops will overcome the "unlawful deportations" from Bisbee, Attorney General Jones wired Governor Campbell.

bers are directed to be present in person and to inform the men of their military status, impressing on them the fact that disobedience of orders is the gravest military crime.

The light hand baggage, containing toilet articles and a change of underclothing, which the men are permitted to take with them to camp, will be inspected by the board, and the list of men sent forward made out and copies of original registration cards prepared.

Alternates Also Called. For each district five alternates will be summoned. They will be held at the assembling point until train time to fill in vacancies should any men of the levy fail to report.

Except for retreat roll call, the men will be given town liberty until 45 minutes before train time.

The board will, during this interval, select one man from the levy whom it deems best qualified to command and place him in charge of the party for its trip. He will name a second in command to aid him and the other men will be told that orders of these two must be obeyed, under pain of military discipline.

The man in charge of the party will then line up the board headquarters, march them to the station to entrain.

There final verification of the list will be made, and if any man of the selected number is missing an alternate will be sent forward in his place. The tickets will then be issued, and the men will be given a copy of the registration cards, which will be turned over to the man in command, and the party will start for its training camp.

It will be the duty of the commander of each party to watch over his men during the trip, to see that all are fed behind at any station where there is no food, and that no liquor is furnished to them en route. When without in six hours of the camp he will die a telegram to the camp adjutant general notifying him of the time of arrival. Immediately upon the departure of the train the local board will send a similar message.

Every precaution has been taken to meet any emergency in advance. Should a train be delayed by accident the commander of each party will have proper telegraph blanks to report the fact to the camp adjutant general and ask instructions.

After the departure of the levy for camp the local boards will turn to gathering up stragglers.

The indicated yield of this kind of American cereals is 3,191,000,000 bushels—a larger crop than was ever raised in a single year before. It is 67,000,000 bushels larger than the 1914 crop, and 9,000,000 bushels larger than was raised last year.

The winter wheat yield is now harvested, and is estimated by the government at 417,000,000, a gain of 15,000,000 bushels over the July forecast. The promise for the whole year is 632,000,000 bushels, or only 13,000,000 bushels above the crop of last year, indicating that there must be a large substitution of other foods for wheat. If the United States is to spare any large amount of this grain for its allies.

The oats crop, however, mostly harvested now, is a record-breaker. It is estimated at 1,455,000,000, compared with a yield of 1,252,000,000 last year, home and export needs.

The indicated yield of white potatoes is for 407,000,000, compared with only 285,000,000 bushels last year.

U. S. WON'T PAY MIDDLEMAN

Their Offers to Sell Declined by Government—Arm Goods Now Bought Direct.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Big firms, particularly department stores and mail order houses having a large commercial business of their own, but which have sought to increase their profits by acting as middlemen between the government and the manufacturers on government contracts, are voicing serious objections these days to the impracticable attitude of the council of national defense, which is objecting to paying a middleman's profit of 10 per cent to them when it is not necessary.

Does not in any way benefit the government. One of the chief heads of these concerns is the war industry is reliably reported to have much material on hand for sale to the government, but the offer has been refused because the government is able to wipe out the middleman's profit on its own account. Purchases made by the government before the entry of the United States into the war and immediate thereafter, before the council of national defense was organized for action, are said to reveal the fact that on some contracts there were as many as four and five middlemen's profits paid to different factors in the selling process. Every encouragement is being given by the government to the manufacturers to carry on their usual commercial business, but an attempt to intervene on behalf of the government has been declined with thanks.

Battle Followed Attempt of Policeman to Disperse Crowd—Son of Former Police Chief Among Five Men Placed Under Arrest.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 9.—Five hundred soldiers of southern Illinois, commanded by Col. Claude E. Ryan of Edgingham, are on guard duty in Springfield following incident in riot in various parts of the city on Tuesday night in connection with the street car strike.

The riots followed the shooting of Policeman Noah Bell, who was attempting to disperse a crowd at Ninth street and North Grand avenue. Bell died a few hours later at a local hospital. Two bullets, alleged to have been fired from a street car, manned by nonunion men, hit Bell in the head. Five men are under arrest, pending an investigation. They are: Ralph Castles, son of former Chief of Police H. Castles of Springfield; Oscar Strok and Joseph J. Strok, who were hired to come to Springfield to guard street cars, and Motorman William Koehle and Conductor Gus Lane.

RECORD 1917 CROP FOR U. S.

Government Estimates Corn Yield at 3,191,000,000 Bushels This Year—Wheat Crop Is Reduced.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Corn to relieve the hunger of the nations at war with Germany; to furnish the alcohol for the powder for the shells of America and its allies; to feed all American live stock and bring down the price of beef and pork, and to make up for the shortage in wheat which is felt over the whole world, is the motto of the government report.

Kerensky has issued a manifesto in which he declares that he considers it impossible when the country is threatened with defeat without and disintegration within to refuse the heavy task again imposed on him, which he regards as an express order from the revolutionary government to carry out the principles already laid down.

"At the same time," said the manifesto, "I consider it inevitable to

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations, she will always
be in the right; but our country, right
or wrong."—Stephen Decatur.

The Saturday Evening Post will say that "Since the executive whose name the critics have retired from office, no president of the United States has had the confidence of the people of this country in a higher
degree than Woodrow Wilson now
has it. When they offer their sons
and their money (for the war) it is
to him they look."

After January 1st there can be no
more common law marriages without a marriage license. Since the common law many common law marriages to escape getting a license, such a marriage being legal if the parties there-
to simply filed a written declaration
of their intention to marry. Under the new law common law marriages may still be performed but the parties are required to first obtain a license before the contract is valid.

Collier's Weekly in a recent issue
pays a very high tribute to Senator
LaFollette for the work he is doing
and the great influence he is having
on the system of taxation that will be used to pay the expenses of the war.
A friend who, though disagreeing with LaFollette's war sentiments, has as much confidence in his ability and
judgment as ever (which means considerable) asks us to publish the Collier's editorial. This we are unable to do for lack of space, though we are glad, in justice to the Senator, to publish this letter isolated, but incidental praise of him. We are glad to testify our belief in Senator La-Follette's ability, honesty and judgment as regards domestic legislation,
which policies on our part matter
little, but which are of great importance to the country, and the conviction that LaFollette's policy of obstruction, petty fault-finding, etc. with regard to the war, when contrasted
with his good record in domestic politics, leaves his record with a stable balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

lege, S. C.; Princeton college, University of Virginia, John Hopkins

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
"He is a past master of the art of telling a story. He has humor, a keen sense of the dramatic, and a knack
of turning out a happy ending just
when the complications of the plot
threaten worse disasters."

This spoke the literary editor of the
New York Times about E. Phillips
Oppenheim, the popular English novel-
list and author of "The Hillman," the new novel we have secured for publication in this paper.

Mr. Oppenheim is without question
one of the most widely read authors
of the day.

"The Hillman" is a study of character development that is one of the
best things this writer has ever done.
The plot is ingenious and the romantic
element strong and unusual.

Many a boy is forced to take music lessons. He should be taking boxing lessons.

WILL GROW NEW WHEAT
Wisconsin farmers are battling for the privilege of growing the new pure bred Wisconsin hard winter wheat.

More than 100 banks in scattered sections of the state have filed application for a consignment of the new wheat grain and today the Wisconsin Bankers' association, announced it may be necessary to cut down the amounts requested by many banks.
It is probable that far more than 1,000 farmers will be growing the new grain.

"We will have more than 40,000
bushels for seedling when the crop
from this year's quota is ready,"
said Mr. Barlett today. "Farmers in every part of the state are anxious to try the grain which, under a four-year test, averaged 38.5 bushels to the acre. Other winter wheats, doing well, average only about twenty bushels to the acre. The new wheat is especially adapted to Wisconsin growing conditions and with a favorable season should make a remarkable showing."

Mr. R. A. Moore of the University of Wisconsin, is responsible for the remarkable grain. The four thousand bushels available for seedling at this time are produced at a higher seed cost than any other wheat in the state.

After battling against all odds, Professor Moore this year offered the four thousand bushels for distribution by the Wisconsin Bankers' association.

Prior to his present successful attempt he conducted a test of four years which was frustrated when floods wiped out his stock of seedling grain. At the same time he started a select barley grain which is now world famous. It is known as Wisconsin barley even abroad, and has proved to be a greater yielding than any other barley available.

The wheat Professor Moore now offers to the country is known as No.
2 Pedigreed Wisconsin Hard Winter wheat. Most winter wheats are soft wheat, and the advent of a hard winter
wheat is hailed with great enthusiasm
by agriculturists throughout the country.

Farmers who are privileged to grow the new wheat this year must sign an application which binds them to keep the seed separate from all other grains on the farm. They must keep the product free for seed and not use it for anything else. If re-distributed to other farmers, they in turn must retain the produce for future seedling until the grain is well established throughout the state.

Then the grain will be offered to grow the new wheat for seedling, as it is declared the wheat will increase production in other wheat districts as well as in Wisconsin.

The price for the original quota of seedling grain was $1 per bushel above
the Milwaukee market price for No. 1 wheat on August 15. Banks are to remit to the distributing agency upon receipt of their allotments and in turn
they will be reimbursed by the 1000
thousand bushels of seedling grain.
Each farmer growing the wheat under agreement is being designated an
"Official Grower."

WHEAT WINTER WHEAT AND RYE
The acreage of winter wheat and rye in Wisconsin will likely increase with a bound this fall.
Records of practically all this season's crops show a notable increase in acreage; this is the reason for increased interest in the call for increased food production and there is every reason to believe that the good work will be kept up when the time comes to put in winter grain.

"Both rye and wheat are excellent for stock raising for Wisconsin," says
R. A. Moore, the well-known Wisconsin grain breeder. Mr. Moore has been successful in breeding pedigreed grains which have won the world as a seed grain state. The strains of rye and wheat bred under his direction at the College of Agriculture have been very successfully grown under northern conditions.

The Wisconsin pedigreed rye has now had 18 years of breeding work placed upon it, and is regarded as one of the best flour-making ryes in Wisconsin. It is the best of about five bushels more per acre than the common varieties.

"Rye responds to good treatment
as well as other plants and will grow on land which would grow corn or wheat, and barley so well; consequently Wisconsin farmers had it as an excellent crop for the light soils of the state. Rye should be sown during the month of September and which has already been put on ground in green peas, potatoes or corn. Corn which has been cut for silage is usually taken from the ground in time for rye."

Rye is generally seeded at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre. Either the drilling or broadcasting method can be used for putting seed in the ground. (If sown the last week in August or first week in September, barley fields may be used for pasture for stock both in fall and spring.
Rye pastured as late as the middle of May will yield a good crop.)

"Wisconsin is now growing a great wheat-growing state but her people turned all their attention to the growing of this crop and consequently the fertility of the lands was soon ruined and people gave up growing this great cereal. Farmers will never again plant wheat continuously but will follow a three or four-year rotation, seeding clover as one of the crops, and then the land is so rich that it cannot be successfully and profitably grown. Two varieties which are being planted very successfully in this state are Wisconsin Pedigreed No. 2 and Pedigreed No. 3. These are strains which have been bred at the Wisconsin college of agriculture
especially for our northern climate.
Both are hard winter wheats."

"Wheat can be sown earlier than rye, though it may be put in as late as the middle of September. It will be better, however, if sown the first week in September. If sown broadcast, wheat should be seeded at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre. If sown in rows, sandy soils where wheat thrives greatly, it should be sown in drills
at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre."

FARMERS LIVE LONGEST
Many have left the farm and gone
to the city to work and live, because
they thought that farm life was too
hard, but the fact of the matter is,
that farmers have a longer life than city dwellers. The average age of a city worker is 58.5 years, while the average age of a farmer is 63.5 years.
There are many reasons for this. One who left the farm in their younger days who would not like to go back to the farm sometimes has to dig and hustle during the seasons when it is the hottest, hottest and late. It is with no small amount of satisfaction that they should contemplate their reward in added years. Furthermore,
from a business point of view, the
farmer is the one man who can make money these days and retain his independence while doing it, a fact that is becoming recognized by the farmers themselves.

The Real Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kittell Webster

(Copyright 1915, The Jobbs-Merrill Company)

—16—

There was something peculiarly horrifying to him in the exhibition Randolph was making of himself. He'd never in his life taken a drink except convulsively, and then he took as little as would pass muster. Going off alone and deliberately fiddling with self, as a means of escaping unpleasant realities, struck him as an act of the basest cowardice. But for that picture of Rose he'd have gone long ago and left Randolph to his bemused reflections. Only . . . Rose had asked him to drop in on the doctor for a visit. Did she mean she wanted him to try to help?

He tried, though not very successfully, to conceal his violent disapproval of the task, when he said: "Look here, Jim! What is the matter with you? Are you sober enough to tell me?"

Randolph put down his glass. "I have told you," he said. "In Eleanor's kept man. Well kept, oh yes! Beautifully kept. I'm nothing but a possession of hers! A trophy of sorts, an ornament. I'm something she's made. I have a big practice. I'm the fashionable doctor in Chicago. They come here, the women, in shoals. That's Eleanor's doing. I'm a faker, a fraud. I pose for them. I play up. I give them what they want. And that's her doing. They go silly about me; fancy they're in love with me."

"I haven't done a lick of honest work in the last year. I can't work. She won't let me work. She—she's a woman. Wherever I turn, she is, smoothing things out, trying to make it easy, trying to anticipate my wants. I've only one want. That's to be alone. She can't do that. She's insatiable. There's always something more she's trying to get, and I'm always trying to keep something away from her, and failing."

"And why? Do you want to know why, Aldrich? That's the crum of the thing. Because we're in love with each other. She wants me to live on her love. To have nothing else to live on."

"Do you want to know what my notion of heaven is? It would be to go off alone, with one suit of clothes in a handbag, oh, and fifty or a hundred dollars in my pocket—I wouldn't mind that. I don't want to be a tramp—to some mining town, or stum, where I could start a general practice; where the things I'd get would be accident cases, confinement cases; real things, urgent things, that night and day are all alike to. I'd like to start again and be poor; get this stink of easy money out of my nostrils. I'd like to see if I could make good on my own."

"I came back from New York, after that look at Rose, meaning to do it; meaning to talk it out with Eleanor and tell her why, and then go. Well, I talked. Talk's cheap. But I didn't go. I'll never go. I'll go on getting softer and more of a fake; more dependent. And Eleanor will go on entangling me up until the last thing she does is to say, 'I'm going to see you, so you see, she'll look at me and see that I'm nothing.'"

Then, with suddenly thickened speech (an affection, perhaps), he looked up at Rodney and demanded:

"What are you looking so solemn about? Can't you take a joke? Come along and have another drink."

"No," Rodney said, "I'm going. And you'd better get home."

Rodney walked home that night like a man dazed. The vividness of one blinding idea blinded him. The thing that Randolph had seen and lacked the courage to do; the thing Rodney despised him for a coward for having failed to do—that thing Rose had done.

Without knowing it, yielding to a blind, unscrutinized instinct, he tried to smooth things out for her, to give her what she wanted. He'd wanted her soft, helpless, dependent. She'd seen, even then, something he'd been blind to—something he'd blinded himself to—that love, by itself, was not enough. That it could poison, as well as feed.

But she had won, among the rest of her spots of victory, the thing she had originally set out to get. His friendship, and respect. Friendship, he remembered her saying, was a thing you had to earn. When you'd earned it, it couldn't be withheld from you. Well, it was right she should be told that; made to understand it to the full. He couldn't ask her to come back to him. But she must know that her respect was as necessary now to him as she'd once said his was to her. He must see her and tell her that.

He stopped abruptly in his walk. His tones, as the Psalmist said, turned to water. How should he confront that gaze of hers, which knew so much and understood so deeply—his with the memory of his two last ignominious encounters with her behind him?

CHAPTER XXIV.

Friends.

Except for the vacuum where the nose and heart of all ought to have been, Rose's life in New York during the year that put her on the highroad to success as a designer of costumes for the theater was a good life, broadening, stimulating, seasoning. It rested, to begin with, on a foundation of adequate material comfort which the unwanted physical privations of the six months that preceded it made seem like positive luxury.

For several months after she came to New York to work for Galbraith she found him a martinet. She never once caught that twinkling gleam of understanding in his eye which had meant so much to her during the rehearsals of "The Girl Upstairs." His manner toward her carried out the tone of the letter she'd got from him in Chicago. It was stiff, formal, severe. He seldom praised her work, and never ungrudgingly. His censure was rare, too, to be sure, but this obviously was because "Rose almost never gave him an excuse for it. Working for him in this mood gave her the uneasy sensation one experiences when walking abroad under a sunny, overcast sky, with mutterings and flashes in it. And then one night a storm broke.

They had lingered in the theater after the dismissal of a rehearsal, to tell over a change in one of the numbers Rose had been working on. It refused to come out satisfactorily. Rose thought she saw a way of doing it that would work better, and she had been telling him about it. Eagerly, at first, and with a timid directness which, however, became clouded and troubled when she felt he wasn't paying attention. It was a difficulty with him she had encountered before.

But tonight, after an angry turn down the aisle and back, he suddenly cried out: "I don't know. I don't know what you've been talking about. I don't know, and I don't care." And then, confronting her, their faces not a foot apart, for by now she had got to her feet, his hands gripped together and shaking, his teeth clenched, his eyes glowing there in the half-light of the auditorium almost like an animal's, he demanded: "Can you see what's the matter with me? Haven't you seen it yet?"

Of course she saw it now, plainly enough. She sat down again, managing an air of deliberation about it, and gripped the back of the orchestra chair in front of her. He remained standing over her there in a rigid pose. When the lightning-toned silence that followed this outburst had grown absolutely unendurable, she spoke. But the only thing she could find to say was almost ludicrously inadequate.

"No, I didn't see it until now. I'm sorry."

"You didn't see it?" he echoed. "I know you didn't. You've never seen me at all, from the beginning, say anything but a machine. But why haven't you? You're a woman. If I ever saw a woman in my life, you're one all the way through. Why couldn't you see that I was a man? It isn't because I've got gray hair, nor because I'm fifty years old. I don't believe you're like that. But even back there in Chicago, the night we walked down the avenue from that store—or the night we had supper together after the show—"

"I suppose I ought to have seen," she said sadly. "Ought to have known that that was all there was to it. But I didn't."

"Well, you see it now," he said savagely fairly, and strode away up the aisle and then back to her. He sat down in the seat in front of her and turned around. "I want to see your face," he said. "There's something I've got to know. Something you've got to tell me. You said once, back there in Chicago, that there was only one person who really mattered to you. I want to know who that person is. What he is. Whether he's still the one person who really matters. If he isn't, I'll take his chance."

Remembering the scene afterward, Rose was a little surprised that she'd been able to answer him as she did, without a hesitation or a stammer, as if she had finished.

"The only person in the world," she said, "who ever has mattered to me, or ever will matter, is my husband. I fell in love with him the day I met him. I was in love with him when I left him. I'm in love with him now. Everything I do that's any good is just something he might be proud of if he knew it. And every failure is just something I hope I would make him understand and not despise me for. It's months since I've seen him, but there isn't a day I don't think about him—and want him. I don't know whether I'll ever see him again, but if I don't, it won't make any difference with that. That's why I didn't see what I might have seen about you. It was just possible for me to see I'd never have seen it if you hadn't told me in so many words, like this. Do you see now?"

He turned away from her with a nod, and put his hands up to his face. She waited a moment to see whether he had anything else to say, for the habit of waiting for his dismissal was too strong to be broken even for a situation like this. But finding that he had got up and walked out of the theater.

There was an hour after that she had gained the haven of her apartment when she pretty well went to pieces. So this was all, was it, that she owed her illusory appearance of success to? The amorous selfishness of a man old enough to be her father! Once more, she blissfully and ignorantly unsuspecting all the while, it was love that had made her world go round. The same attraction that James Randolph long ago had told her about. All she'd accomplished in that bitter year since she left Rodney had been to make another man fall in love with her, and then he wants something that's altogether apart from his work. Love's about as far away as anything he can get. So that the notion of our working ourselves half to death over the same job, and then going home together—

"Yes," she admitted. "I can see that. But that doesn't cover friendship." He owned that it didn't. "But when I fell in love with a woman, this isn't a fact I'm proud of, but it's true—I'm jealous of her. I want to be everything to her. I want her to think nobody else could be right and I be wrong. And I want to be able to think the same of her." He thought it over a bit longer, and then went on: "No, I've been in love with women I thought were lying to me. I've been in love with women I've known I was wrong. I've never been in love with a woman who was my friend." He had been tramping along, communing with his pipe, thinking aloud. If he'd been watching Rose's face he wouldn't have gone so far.

"Well, if it's like that—," she said, and the quality of her voice drew his full attention instantly. "If love has to be like that, then the game doesn't seem worth going on with. You can't live with it, and you can't live without it." Her voice dropped a little, but he gained in intensity. "At least I can't. I don't believe I can." She stopped and faced him. "What can one do?"

"My love affair brought me a home and—kids," she said. "There are two of them—twins—a year and a half old now; and I went off and left them; left him. I thought that by earning my own way, building a life that he didn't surround, as you say, I could win his friendship. And have his love besides. I don't suppose you would have believed that either he or I was a fool in the world as I was to do that."

He took a while digesting this truly amazing statement of hers. But at last he said: "No, I wouldn't call you a fool. I call a fool a person who thinks he can get something for nothing. You didn't think that. You were willing to pay a heavy price to get what you wanted. For what you wanted. And I've an idea, you know, that you never really pay without getting something."

"I don't know," she said roughly. "Perhaps."

There was a seven-thirty train to town, and they finished their walk at the station. She got back to her apartment about nine. Two corners of white projected from under her door, a visiting card and a folded bit of paper. It was Rodney's card, and on it he'd written: "Sorry to have missed you. I'll come back at eight."

She shook her head and fumbled tititatively over the folds of the note, but she got it open at last. It was from him, too. It read:

Dear Rose: This is hard luck. I suppose you're off for a week-end somewhere. I want very much to see you. When you come back and have leisure for me, will you call me up? I know how busy you are, so I'll wait until I hear from you. RODNEY.

When the telephone girl switched her to the information desk, and the information clerk said: "Mr. Rodney Aldrich? Just a moment," and then: "Mr. Aldrich is in fifteen minute five," the dry construction in her throat made it impossible for her to speak. She remembered his first "Hello," and he said it again, sharply. "Hello, what is it?"

And then suddenly her voice came back. A voice that startled her with its distinctness. "Hello, Rodney," she said. "This is Rose."

There was a perfectly blank silence after that, and then the crisp voice of an operator somewhere—"Waiting?"—inquired—something I wouldn't trade for all the love in the world."

"I'd like to believe it was a better thing," she said, "but I'm afraid I can't."

"Neither could I when I was—how old are you?—twenty-four. Perhaps when you're fifty-one you can."

She stopped. "So?" she asked absently. "Perhaps if it were a question of choosing between a love that hadn't any friendship in it and a friendship that hadn't any love in it?"

"But it can't be like that! Can it? Can't one have both? Can't a man—love a woman and be her friend and partner all at the same time?"

"I can't answer for every man," he said reflectively. "But I've noticed nine out of a dozen, if you could get down to the actual bedrock facts about them, would own up to it if they were in love with a woman—really, you know—they wouldn't want her for a partner, and wouldn't be able to see her as a friend. That's just a guess, of course. But there's one thing I know, and that is that I couldn't."

She gave a little shiver. "Oh, what a mess it is!" she said. "What a perfectly hopeless blunder it is!" She slid down from the wall. "Come, let's walk."

He fell in beside her, and they tramped steadily along for a while in silence. At last he said: "I don't know that I can explain it, but I don't think I'd call it a blunder that a strip of spring steel can't bend in your finger like copper, and still go on being a spring. You see, it's a man who's loved and then he wants something that's altogether apart from his work. Love's about as far away as anything he can get. So that the notion of our working ourselves half to death over the same job, and then going home together—

"Yes," she admitted. "I can see that. But that doesn't cover friendship." He owned that it didn't. "But when I fell in love with a woman, this isn't a fact I'm proud of, but it's true—I'm jealous of her. I want to be everything to her. I want her to think nobody else could be right and I be wrong. You can't live with it, and you can't live without it." Her voice dropped a little, but he gained in intensity. "At least I can't. I don't believe I can." She stopped and faced him. "What can one do?"

own way, building a life that he didn't surround, as you say, I could win his friendship. And have his love besides. I don't suppose you would have believed that either he or I was a fool in the world as I was to do that."

He took a while digesting this truly amazing statement of hers. But at last he said: "No, I wouldn't call you a fool. I call a fool a person who thinks he can get something for nothing. You didn't think that. You were willing to pay a heavy price to get what you wanted. For what you wanted. And I've an idea, you know, that you never really pay without getting something."

"I don't know," she said roughly. "Perhaps."

There was a seven-thirty train to town, and they finished their walk at the station. She got back to her apartment about nine. Two corners of white projected from under her door, a visiting card and a folded bit of paper. It was Rodney's card, and on it he'd written: "Sorry to have missed you. I'll come back at eight."

She shook her head and fumbled tititatively over the folds of the note, but she got it open at last. It was from him, too. It read:

Dear Rose: This is hard luck. I suppose you're off for a week-end somewhere. I want very much to see you. When you come back and have leisure for me, will you call me up? I know how busy you are, so I'll wait until I hear from you. RODNEY.

When the telephone girl switched her to the information desk, and the information clerk said: "Mr. Rodney Aldrich? Just a moment," and then: "Mr. Aldrich is in fifteen minute five," the dry construction in her throat made it impossible for her to speak. She remembered his first "Hello," and he said it again, sharply. "Hello, what is it?"

And then suddenly her voice came back. A voice that startled her with its distinctness. "Hello, Rodney," she said. "This is Rose."

There was a perfectly blank silence after that, and then the crisp voice of an operator somewhere—"Waiting?"—inquired—something I wouldn't trade for all the love in the world."

"I'd like to believe it was a better thing," she said, "but I'm afraid I can't."

"Neither could I when I was—how old are you?—twenty-four. Perhaps when you're fifty-one you can."

She stopped. "So?" she asked absently. "Perhaps if it were a question of choosing between a love that hadn't any friendship in it and a friendship that hadn't any love in it?"

"But it can't be like that! Can it? Can't one have both? Can't a man—love a woman and be her friend and partner all at the same time?"

"I can't answer for every man," he said reflectively. "But I've noticed nine out of a dozen, if you could get down to the actual bedrock facts about them, would own up to it if they were in love with a woman—really, you know—they wouldn't want her for a partner, and wouldn't be able to see her as a friend. That's just a guess, of course. But there's one thing I know, and that is that I couldn't."

She gave a little shiver. "Oh, what a mess it is!" she said. "What a perfectly hopeless blunder it is!" She slid down from the wall. "Come, let's walk."

He fell in beside her, and they tramped steadily along for a while in silence. At last he said: "I don't know that I can explain it, but I don't think I'd call it a blunder that a strip of spring steel can't bend in your finger like copper, and still go on being a spring. You see, it's a man who's loved and then he wants something that's altogether apart from his work. Love's about as far away as anything he can get. So that the notion of our working ourselves half to death over the same job, and then going home together—

"Yes," she admitted. "I can see that. But that doesn't cover friendship." He owned that it didn't. "But when I fell in love with a woman, this isn't a fact I'm proud of, but it's true—I'm jealous of her. I want to be everything to her. I want her to think nobody else could be right and I be wrong. And I want to be able to think the same of her." He thought it over a bit longer, and then went on: "No, I've been in love with women I thought were lying to me. I've been in love with women I've known I was wrong. I've never been in love with a woman who was my friend." He had been tramping along, communing with his pipe,

thinking aloud. If he'd been watching Rose's face he wouldn't have gone so far.

"Well, if it's like that—," she said, and the quality of her voice drew his full attention instantly. "If love has to be like that, then the game doesn't seem worth going on with. You can't live with it, and you can't live without it." Her voice dropped a little, but he gained in intensity. "At least I can't. I don't believe I can." She stopped and faced him. FOR MOTHERS OF WISCONSIN

Everyone would choose to have a perfect baby, but no one has control over his body at birth, and sometimes an unkind Fate sends into this world a little baby with a crippled limb, a crooked back, a hard palate or some other physical defect. If left untreated, would all his life handicap him in the race of those more nearly physically perfect. Measures of success of his whole life will depend entirely upon the care and treatment given him by those responsible for his welfare.

Modern surgery does wonderful things, and often the crippled limb can be made strong, the crooked back straight and the hard palate made perfect, if only the work is done at the right time.

Sometimes the parents of such a child are ignorant of what can be done to remedy the trouble or when it should be done; sometimes they think they cannot afford to pay what the skill of the surgeon demands.

The 1917 legislature of Wisconsin has just passed two laws by which the state is going to help the unfortunate babies, if their parents are unable to do so. What a grand work for a state to do, to make able-bodied citizens out of crippled babies.

By Chapters 98 and 105 of the Laws of 1917, the attending physician shall, within twenty-four hours after the birth (sometimes special treatments should begin as early as that) of any child with a deformity or physical defect, directly notify the State Board of Health of such deformity or defect, and the secretary of said board shall in turn make a report thereof to the state board of control, which is instructed to place such child in "such appropriate hospital as the board may determine for surgical or other treatment and care, whenever in the judgment of the board, such child would be benefited thereby, and such treatment has not been or is not likely to be otherwise provided."

One of the laws also states that this report shall be made in confidence so that the name or address of the deformed or defective child shall not be divulged in any newspaper, magazine or other publication. This little explanation is written so that the mothers of Wisconsin know just what the law is, in the hope that they will co-operate with the doctors in bringing all such unfortunate children, up to the age of 14 years, to the place where they can get the necessary care and surgical treatment.

A Mythical Lover

By MARTHA V. MONROE

My dear, you being my most intimate friend, I write you first of all to announce my engagement. Harry after hanging about me for two years has at last proposed. How much longer he would have continued to do so had I not by my own skillful manipulation brought him to terms I don't know. As it is, I had a hard time landing him and did so only after a number of efforts had failed.

Now, I wish to assure you, my dear, that if you have occasion to bring a man to terms, do not adopt any of the old fashioned methods that are well known—that is, if you are playing a man who is as adept at the game as you. I tried a number of them on Harry, and he was too smart for them all. First I told him that I was intending to study the law and would make a vow of celibacy that I might be wedded only to my professional work. He laughed me to scorn; drew ironical pictures of my arguing a case before a jury; said he would like to be the judge before whom I pleaded a case, and that.

About the time of this first failure the European war broke out, and I threatened to go abroad and take care of sick and wounded soldiers. He said he was thinking of going to France and enlisting in the Foreign Legion. I didn't go as a nurse, and he didn't go as a soldier. He had met my bluff with one of his own.

Then Howard Wentworth came to town, and of all the girls here he seemed to prefer me. Taking advantage of my preference, I encouraged him, especially in presence of Harry. What did the scound do but devote himself to Agnes Woodruff. I was frightened for fear she would get him away from me and dropped Mr. Wentworth immediately. After I had done so Harry gradually ceased to pay marked attention to Agnes, but I knew that he was still more or less devoted to her, and it worried me.

Having heard that Aunt Caroline had been in her youth skillful at the game of hearts, I confessed my failures and my anxiety to her and asked her to help me.

"The trouble with your expedients," she said to me, "is that they are too palpable. One of those you have tried is excellent, but you did not apply it in the right way. I refer to your attempt to plume your lover by accepting the attentions of another man. You should not have called in the attentions of a real admirer, but an imaginary one."

Not understanding what Aunt Carrie meant, I asked her to explain. She did so and gave me the identical method by which she brought Uncle John to terms twenty years ago. I made up my mind to try it.

My first move was to nerve myself to treat Harry with indifference for a stated period. This being a part of a general plan, I was enabled to play the part pretty well. I was careful not to overact it, in order that he might not see through what I was up to. Having apparently grown more indifferent to him for three or four months, I accepted an invitation from Elmer Trask to make her a visit. I remained away six weeks, and when I came home I talked a great deal to my intimate girl friends about a fascinating fellow I had met, or rather had not met, during my visit, giving them the impression that I had been much taken up with him. Of course they spread a report that I was either engaged or was likely to be engaged, and it reached Harry's ears.

Nevertheless so confident was he that he could drop me and take me up when he pleased that he placed but little confidence in my preference for him having been diverted to another channel. He came to see me on my return from my visit, twitted me on having lost my heart during my absence, and asked for a description of this "Adonis" as he called my mythical lover, who had been so fortunate as to win such a prize as myself. I turned the conversation upon other topics. Harry asked me to go to the theater with him the next evening. I told him so decidedly that I had a previous engagement that he did not ask for another evening.

Harry did not call again for some time. Meanwhile I was talking to my chums about the fascinating man I had met, confident that what I said would reach the man I really loved. The time he called on me telephoned to a florist, with whom I had left an order for flowers to be filled on call, to send them at once. Half an hour later the flowers came and were brought into the room to me where I was sitting with Harry. Pretending to be anxious about them, I opened the box containing them. Inside was a little envelope. I seized it and without opening it held it in the palm of my hand.

This was altogether too much for Harry's equality. He demanded to see the card of the sender, and I refused to give it to him. He turned very red, then pale, and I saw that an emotional storm was raging within him. I let him go on till he had committed himself, after which he lost all interest as to who sent the flowers, for we were engaged.

I assure you, my dear, I am very happy, and as for my mythical lover, I think it is perfectly honorable for me to have used him, for he can't be a bit disappointed.

WOMEN'S WAR WORK

(Contributed by a Woman)

Sir: Granting the truth of your recent contention that play is essential to a woman's life, I maintain that work is equally important to the average American woman. And, at the same time, an economic world need of workers coincides with the needs of our bodies and minds.

Industry needs workers and people need to be industrious. Today the factories and farms and printing companies are not turning out workers and applicants. The old sign, "All Positions are Filled," is covered with dust; the "Help Wanted" sign is working overtime. We are no longer harassed by the sight of scantily clad men and women traveling from door to door in quest of work. We pitied these creatures with starving bodies. Work may be a factor in saving us from the fate of being equally pitiable with starving minds.

We need work for the same reasons that we need play; to keep our minds healthy and active; to divert us from agonizing worry over our sons, our husbands, and our brothers at the front. We need diversion and diversion of play alone will not suffice. Work, active and absorbing, will prove our mainstay in the strain which we who remain at home must undergo.

We need more than a few hours a day of knitting or bandage-rolling; we need steady, relentless work, work which will leave us so bodily and mentally weary at night that we cannot dream. Work is one of the best balms for the harassed mind.

Our country is in crying need of workers; she needs a vast army of producers to make food and clothes and ammunition for ourselves and our allies. By answering her need we may help defeat two enemies; the enemy abroad and our own insidious, home enemy—worry. Let us not go as a soldier. Let us go as a worker. Let us make a contribution to the indefinable needs of our country. Let us, unless we have wholesome, constructive ideas to offer the world, turn our strength from purposeless release to the material existence of work and sleep and play.

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations, may she always
be in the right; but our country, right
or wrong."—Stephen Decatur.

The Saturday Evening Post will say that "the executive whose name is capital bears retired from
office, no president of the United States has had the confidence of the
people of this country in a higher
degree than Woodrow Wilson now
has it. When they enter their sons
and their money (for the war) it is
to him they look."

After January 1st there can be no
more common law marriages without a marriage license. Since the civil law was passed in 1915 there have been many common law marriages to escape getting a license, such a marriage being legal if the parties there-
to simply filed a written declaration
of their intention with a register of deeds. Under the new law common law marriages may still be portended
but the parties are required to first obtain a license before the contract is valid.

Collier's Weekly in a recent issue
pays a very high tribute to Senator
La Follette for the work he is doing
and the great influence he is having
on the system of taxation that will be used to pay the expenses of the war.
A friend who thought disinterestedly with La Follette's sentiments, has
much confidence in his ability and
judgment as ever (which means considerable) asks us to publish the Collier's editorial. (We are unable to do so for lack of space, though we are glad, in justice to the Senator, to publish this rather isolated, but influential praise of him. We are glad to see the war overclouds every other issue in America, since long before La Follette had any part in the affairs of the country, and no matter
how much we may regret the decision, we have developed in a considerable degree the policy of obstruction, partly fault-finding, and with regard to the war, when contrasted with his good record on domestic politics, leaves his record with a considerable balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

WILSON—WAR PRESIDENT
President Wilson's name will go down in history among the score or more great war statesmen in the annals of the world.
Here are some of the facts of his life that would interest grandchildren

Pennsylvania.

sides. Educated by his father, a noted scholar, and at Davidson college, S. C.; Princeton college, University of Virginia, John Hopkins University.
Practiced law at Atlanta, Ga., 1891-93.
Served on teaching staff of Bryn Mawr college, Pa.; Wesleyan University and Princeton University. President of Princeton college, 1902-10.
Elected president of the United States, 1912.

ington," "History of the American People," "Constitutional Government
in the United States" and other historical and political works.

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
"He is a past master of the art of telling a story. He has humor, a keen
sense of the dramatic, and a knack
of turning out a happy ending just
when the complications of the plot
threaten worse disasters."
Thus spoke the literary editor of the
New York Times about E. Phillips
Oppenheim, the popular English novel-
list and author of "The Illusion," the new serial we have secured for publication in this paper.
Mr. Oppenheim is without question
one of the most widely read authors
of the day.
"The Illusion" is a study of character development that is one of the
best things this writer has ever done.
The plot is tenuous and the romantic
element strong and unusual.

Many a boy is forced to take mind-boggling lessons.

WILLIAMSON FARMERS HAVE LONGEST
Many have left the farm and gone
to the city to work and live, because
they thought that farm life was too
hard, but the fact of the matter is,
that farmers have a longer lease of
life than city dwellers. Their average age being 53.5 years, while
office workers die at the average of 36.5 years. There are mighty few
who left the farm in their pouter
years, but would not like to go back
or trade with some farmer. And
though it seems pretty hard the way
the farmer sometimes has to live and
bustle during the season when it
is the hottest, putting in long hours
both early and late, it is with a small amount of satisfaction that
they should contemplate their return to the added years. Furthermore,
from a business point of view, the
farmer is the one man who can make
money these days and retain his independence while doing so. In fact,
it is becoming recognized by the
farmers themselves.

WILLIAMSON FARMERS HAVE LONGEST
Many have left the farm and gone
to the city to work and live, because
they thought that farm life was too
hard, but the fact of the matter is,
that farmers have a longer lease of
life than city dwellers. Their average age being 53.5 years, while
office workers die at the average of 36.5 years. There are mighty few
who left the farm in their pouter
years, but would not like to go back
or trade with some farmer. And
though it seems pretty hard the way
the farmer sometimes has to live and
bustle during the season when it
is the hottest, putting in long hours
both early and late, it is with a
small amount of satisfaction that
they should contemplate their return to the added years. Furthermore,
from a business point of view, the
farmer is the one man who can make
money these days and retain his independence while doing so. In fact,
it is becoming recognized by the
farmers themselves.

“Our country!” In her intercourse with foreign nations, may she always be in the right; for our country, right or wrong.—Stephen Decatur.

The Saturday Evening Post well says that “Since the executive whose name the capitol bears retired from office, no president has had the confidence of the States in the confidence of the United States has been in a higher degree than Woodrow Wilson now has it. When they cheer for the war it is their money for the war it is to him they look.”

After January 1st there can be no more common law marriages without a marriage license. Since there have been many common law marriages to escape getting a license, such a marriage being legal if the parties there to simply filed a written declaration of their intention with a register of deeds. Under the new law common law marriages may still be performed, but the parties are required to first obtain a license before the contract is valid.

Collier's Weekly in a recent issue pays a very high tribute to Senator LaFollette for the work he is doing and the great influence he is having on the system of taxation that will be used to pay the expenses of the war. A friend who, though disagreeing with LaFollette's war sentiments, has as much confidence in his ability and judgment as ever (which means considerable) asks us to publish the Collier's editorial. This we are unable to do for lack of space, though we are glad, in justice to the Senator, to publish this rather isolated but significant praise of him. We are glad to testify our belief in Senator LaFollette's ability, honesty and judgment as regards domestic legislation which he has on our part makes him one of the most regrettable to us. The war overshadows every other issue in America since long before LaFollette's policy of obstruction, petty fault-finding and with reaction to the war, when contrasted with his good record on domestic policies, leaves his record with a slight balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

WILSON—WAR PRESIDENT
President Wilson's name will go down in history among the score or more great war statesmen in the annals of the world.
Here are some of the facts of his life for your children and grandchildren will learn from the school books:
Born Dec. 28, 1856, at Staunton, Pennsylvania.
Ancestry: Scotch-Irish on both sides. Educated by his father, a noted scholar, and at Davidson college, S. C.; Princeton college, University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins University.
Practiced law at Atlanta, Ga., 1881-83.
Served on teaching staff of Bryn Mawr college, Pa.; Wesleyan University and Princeton University. President of Princeton college, 1902-10.
Elected president of the United States, 1912.
Author of “Life of George Washington,” “History of the American People,” “Constitutional Government in the United States” and other historical and political works.

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
“He is a past master of the art of telling a story. He has humor, a keen sense of the dramatic, and a knack of turning out a happy ending just when the complications of the plot threaten worse disasters.”
Thus spoke the literary editor of the New York Times about E. Phillips Oppenheim, the popular English novelist and author of “The Hiltman,” the new serial we have secured for publication in this paper.
Mr. Oppenheim is without question one of the most widely read authors of the day.
“The Hiltman” is a study of character development that is one of the best things this writer has ever done. The plot is ingenious and the romantic element strong and unusual.
Many a boy is forced to take music lessons when he should be taking boxing lessons.

WILL GROW NEW WHEAT
Wisconsin farmers are battling for the privilege of growing the new pure bred Wisconsin hard winter wheat.
More than 100 banks in scattered sections of the state have filed application for a consent of the Federal Reserve Bank and today the Eastern Bankers' association, announced it may be necessary to cut down the amounts requested by more than 1,000 farmers will be growing the new grain.
“We will have more than 40,000 bushels for seed when the crop from this year's quota is threshed,” said Mr. Bartlett today. “Farmers in every part of the state are anxious to try the new wheat, and a fourth to acre, other winter wheats, doing well, average only about twenty bushels to the acre. The new wheat is especially adapted to Wisconsin's growing conditions and with a favorable season should make a remarkable showing.”
Prof. R. L. Moore of the University of Wisconsin, is responsible for the remarkable grain. The four thousand bushels available for seed at this time are the product of a single seed selected by him ten years ago, after battling against all odds. Professor Moore this year offered the four thousand bushels for distribution to the Wisconsin Bankers' association.
Prior to his present successful attempt he conducted a similar experiment which was frustrated when years wiped out his stock of selected grain. At the same time he started the present grain he began breeding a select barley grain which is now being grown in Wisconsin. He has proven by lost a greater bearing than any other barley yield he has seen in Wisconsin. Moore now offers to the country is known as No. 2 Pedigreed Wisconsin Hard Winter wheat. Most winter wheats are sold at the advent of a hard winter, which is baited with great enthusiasm by agriculturists throughout the country.
Farmers who are privileged to grow the new wheat this year must sign an application which binds them to keep the seed separate from all other grains on the farm. They must keep the seed separate, again, next year and if re-distributed to other farmers, they in turn must agree to retain the product and use it for seed throughout the state. Then the grain will be offered to the entire country for seed, as it is declared the wheat will increase production in Wisconsin.
The price for the original quota of seed will be $1 per bushel and for No. 1 seed $1.25 per bushel. Banks are to remit to the distributing agency upon receipt of their allotment and in the future will be $1.25 per bushel. Each farmer growing the wheat under agreement is being designated an “Official Grower.”

URGES WINTER WHEAT AND RYE
The acreage of winter wheat and rye in Wisconsin will likely increase with a bound this fall.
Records of practically all this season's crop show a notable increase in acreage; this is the response of farmer to the call for increased food production and there is every reason to believe the time comes to put in winter grain.
“Both rye and wheat are excellent winter grains,” says E. J. Hoot, of the well-known Wisconsin grain breeder. Mr. Moore has been successful in breeding pedigreed grains which have made Wisconsin a grain state. The strains of rye and wheat bred under his direction at the College of Agriculture have been successfully grown under northern conditions.
The Wisconsin pedigreed rye has now had 18 years of breaking work placed upon it, and is regarded as one of the best winter ryes in Wisconsin. It has given a yield of about five bushels more per acre than the common varieties.
It responds to good treatment as well as other plants and will grow on land which does not produce wheat, oats and barley so well, and it is a winter crop for the light soils of the state. Rye should be sown during the month of September and usually is put on ground which has been sown to corn or corn, which has been out for silage is usually taken from the ground in time for rye.
Rye is generally seeded at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre. Either the drilling or broadcast method can be used for putting seed on the ground. If sown the last week in August, the first week in September, rye fields may be used for pasture for stock both in fall and spring. Rye pastured as late as the middle of May will yield a good crop.
“Wisconsin was formerly a great wheat-growing state but her people turned all their attention to corn growing of this crop and consequently the fertility of the lands was soon ruined and people gave up growing this great cereal. Farmers will never again plant wheat continuously but will follow a three or four-year rotation, seeding clover as one of the rotation crops, and then successfully and profitably grown. Two varieties which are being planted very successfully in this state are Wisconsin Red and Wisconsin White. These are strains which have been bred at the Wisconsin college of agriculture especially for our northern climate. Both are hard winter wheats. Rye can be sown earlier than wheat, though it may be put in as late as the middle of September. It will be better, however, if sown broad cast, wheat should be seeded at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre. On very light, sandy soils where wheat stools greatly, it should be sown in drills at the rate of 1 1/2 bushels an acre.”

FARMERS LIVE LONGEST
Many have left the farm and gone to the city to work for a living, because they thought that farm life was too hard, but the fact of the matter is that farmers have a longer life expectancy than any other class of people. The average age being 58.5 years, while office workers die at the average of 36.5 years. There are mighty few who left the farm in their prime and then returned to it like to get back to the life of a farmer. And though it seems pretty hard the way the farmer sometimes looks at it, it is the healthiest, putting in long hours both early and late, it is with no small amount of satisfaction that they have added years to their life. Furthermore, in a business point of view, the farmer is the one man who can make money these days and retain his independence while doing it, a fact that is becoming recognized by the farmers themselves.

FRATERNAL DAY AT STATE FAIR
Immense Fraternal City to Be Established on the Fair Grounds, Each Order Maintaining Separate Headquarters—Drill Competitions to Be Held Tuesday Night, Sept. 11—Fraternal Congress Committee is in Charge.
Milwaukee, Aug. 12.—Fraternalists of Wisconsin, under direction of a committee of the Wisconsin Fraternal League, of which John W. Brown of Stevens Point is secretary, will have a big day at this year's State Fair.
Fraternal Day will be Tuesday, Sept. 11.
All fraternal organizations in the Badger State have combined to make this even larger than State Day, which will be Sept. 12. The committee has selected a float.

STATE FAIR HELP FIGURES.
To guard the State Fair grounds requires nearly 200 men all week. Over fifty ticket sellers and takers are necessary. It requires nearly 2000 employees in all capacities to run the fair.
Fraternal organizations are planning to make Fraternal Day of value to them as well as of value to the State Fair. They intend the day as a sort of rallying time for consolidation of fraternal matters, and it is understood that a number of fraternal orders intend to hold state or national conventions in Milwaukee during State Fair Week, Sept. 10 to 15.
Bureaus to provide rooms and other accommodations will be maintained during their stay will be maintained both in the downtown district in Milwaukee and on the fair grounds.
Fraternal Day was established in 1915. It is expected that a Fraternal organization will maintain a headquarters all week. There will be special some day.

SIX FULL DAYS OF RACING AT THE WISCONSIN STATE FAIR
Four Days of Harness Racing, Includes Two $5,000 Stakes—Professional and State Auto Drivers Will Be Seen During Friday and Saturday in Championship Events.
Milwaukee, Aug. 29.—Followers of harness and automobile racing will find plenty worth their patronage at this year's State Fair, Sept. 10 to 16. There will be four days of the trotters and pacers, Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13, and two days of the auto speed demons, Sept. 14 and 15.
The star race on the opening day will be the $2,000 2:09 pace. On Tuesday the 2:05 trot and the 2:09 pace will be the features. On Wednesday, State Day, the $5,000 Plunkinton Hotel 2:12 pace will be raced, and on Thursday, Milwaukee Day, the $5,000 Chamber of Commerce stake for 2:12 trotters and the $1,500 Free-for-all pace will be star events.
Although harness racing at the Wisconsin State Fair has attained a high plane and is easily of grand circuit caliber, it remains for this year's Fair to present the banner program of its sixty-seven years of history. The great Fair is able to accomplish this because members of the Chamber of Commerce and the owner of the Plunkinton Hotel have guaranteed the two big $5,000 stakes.
Many trotters and pacers will come from the Grand Circuit to compete for money hung up at the State Fair, and the Milwaukee track is the only western track that will see these horses this year.
The free-for-all pace, for instance, is from the Grand Circuit to compete for money hung up at the State Fair, and the Milwaukee track is the only western track that will see these horses this year.
One of the chief events for professionals will be an attempt to lower the track record of 4:04, seconds, made by Bob Hurman in the famous Hitzon Benz. Disbrow believes he can clip a fraction of a second off this mark if weather and track are ideal.
Citizens of Milwaukee have asked that Disbrow make an effort to lower the track record after the harness racing program has been concluded on Milwaukee and perhaps this request will be granted.

LARGEST FLAG IN THE WORLD.
The largest American flag ever made and, by the way, the largest flag in the world, again will be one of the big features of the fair. It will be unfurled each day and night when patriotic airs are sung by the crowds, all the bands on the grounds playing accompaniments.
To become the property of any driver this car must be won three years in a row.
It is expected that Saturday will be chiefly devoted to the state championships.

ADDITION TO PAPER MILL
 Stevens Point Journal: A large addition to the plant of the Wisconsin Paper and Pulp company was announced by Charles A. Babcock of the company and principal owner, at a meeting of the board of directors last Friday. Ray Hollister of Marsh, also considerably interested in the company's stock, was here with Babcock.

The addition 68x112 feet, the full size of the mill, will be built on the east end. It will be used as a finishing room, stock room and new office. Mr. Babcock also said there would be a general revamping and adding in other departments.

The new work is almost immediately under way. It is desired that the business be so large as to crowd the facilities of the plant and indicate a favor continued steady development. The need for more room has been the chief argument to build at Stevens Point. The new addition is now under way. It is estimated that the new plant will be completed in the fall of 1911.

FOR MOTHERS OF WISCONSIN

Everyone would choose to have a perfect body, but no one has control over his body at birth, and sometimes a little baby with a crippled limb, a crooked back, a hare lip, a cleft palate or some other physical defect, which if left untreated, would ruin his life.
Modern surgery does wonderful things, and often the crippled limb
can be made strong, the crooked back made straight and the hare lip made perfect, if only the work is done at the right time.
Sometimes the parents of such a child are ignorant of what can be done to remedy the trouble or when it should be done; or perhaps they think they cannot afford to pay what
the skill of the surgeon demands.
The 1917 legislature of Wisconsin has just passed two laws by which the state itself is going to help the unfortunate babies, if their parents are unable to do so. What a grand work for a state to do, to make able-bodied citizens out of crippled babies.
Briefly stated the new laws are as follows: By chapters 98 and 105 of the Laws of 1917, the attending physician shall, within twenty-four hours
after the birth (sometimes special treatments should begin as early as that) of any child with a deformity of physical defect, directly notify the State Board of Health of such de-formity or defect, and the secretary of said board in turn make a report thereof to the state board of control, which is instructed to place
such child in "such appropriate hospital or institution for the care of surgical or other treatment and care, whenever in the judgment of the board, such child would be benefited thereby, and such treatment has not been or is not likely to be otherwise provided."
One of the laws also states that these reports shall be treated as confidential so that the name or address of the deformed or defective child shall not be divulged in any newspaper, magazine or other publication.
This little explanation is written so that the mothers of Wisconsin may know just what the law is, in the hope that they will co-operate with the doctors in bringing all such unfortunate children, up to the age of 14 years, to the place where they can get the necessary care and surgical treatment.
